

Coping with Moral Injury

- 1. Start each day by remembering that your intention is to offer compassionate, competent care.
- 2. Notice sensations in the body that are signaling that you are in distress. Pause and take a few full breaths.
- 3. Listen for your internal self-talk. If it is harsh, judging you negatively, blaming or shaming you, kindly tell that inner critic that you and everyone else are doing the best they can under challenging circumstances.
- 4. Create a buddy system for each shift and check in, even briefly, with your buddy regularly through your shift.
- 5. Think of how much a loved one cares for you every time you wash your hands.
- 6. Recognize that circumstances, not you, may produce harms.
- 7. Repeat: Everyone, including you, is just doing the best that one can do.
- 8. Be kind to others and yourself whenever possible.
- 9. Designate someone on each shift or at the end of a work day to offer a brief appreciation to those who have served. Preferably the acknowledgment and appreciation can be observed by at least one other person.
- 10. When you leave work, take good care of your body, mind and spirit. Sit in silence to allow your soul to catch up with you.
